Why Should I Travel on China High Speed Rail

China is a big country. The high-speed rail network in China connects major cities from all four corners of the country, connecting families, friends, and businesses. A ride on China high-speed rail won't be cheap, but it's a must do during your time studying, travelling or working in China.

So why should I travel on China high-speed rail? There's only one thing that should put you off travelling on the high-speed rail rather than a slower train or bus, and that's the price.

Fast

They're pretty fast. The fastest in the world, in fact. Unless you're planning to take a flight, it's the quickest way to get from A to B. And it's fun travelling at such high speeds with incredibly smooth trains running across the country every hour of every day.

Convenient

Visiting virtually all of China's 34 provinces, it couldn't be more convenient. Unlike flight, train stations are usually much closer to the city. This means you don't have to travel so far to get to the stations.

Comfortable

There are a few classes to choose from, but even second class, the cheapest class, it's pretty comfortable. There's a large amount of space—much more than on an aeroplane, and you can walk around freely. Smokers should be warned that unlike on the slow trains, smoking is not allowed on the high-speed rail.

Punctual

Unlike other train services in China, which, to be fair, aren't delayed all that often anyway, it is almost unheard of for a bullet train to be delayed. It is less affected by weather conditions or traffic control.

- ☐ 1. A ride on China high-speed rail is always cheap.
- ☐ 2. China has the fastest high-speed rail network in the world.
- ☐ 3. The train stations in China are usually far away from the cities.
- ☐ 4. Smoking is allowed on the high-speed trains.
- ☐ 5. Bullet trains in China are often delayed due to weather conditions or traffic control.

III. Read and choose. 读下文，选择正确答案。

How to Buy China Train Tickets Online

The best part about modern-day China train travel is that most of the ticketing has moved online. You can book it from the comfort of your home country and pick it up once you arrive in China.

There are three main ways to book online:

12306 Website

The website 12306.cn is the official China railway website and is the best way to purchase train tickets on your computer. Unfortunately, it's not the easiest. Aside from the website being all in Chinese, it also requires a Chinese phone number and a Chinese bank account. They don't accept foreign credit cards right now.

Phone Apps

I've recently fallen in love with the 12306 phone app, available on both Android and Apple iOS. Like the website, it's only offered in Chinese and requires a Chinese bank card to use. It allows you to check trains timetable and book your tickets online in a very simple way. You can also purchase tickets on WeChat and Alipay.

Third Party Providers

For most travellers, this will be your only option but thankfully it's not a bad one. Third party providers not only allow you to purchase tickets in English and use your foreign credit card, they'll also arrange to have the tickets delivered to your hotel for you! In every case, these companies charge a fee, but usually it's only a few dollars per ticket.

Let me stress this—I strongly, STRONGLY advise you to purchase tickets online before your trip. Buying tickets in the station ticket hall takes a lot of time and is difficult, especially if you don't speak Chinese. It is possible to purchase China train tickets up to 30 days in advance of your departure. This and other rules about buying China train tickets have made train travel very popular.
